Outdoor Spaces and Buildings

Think about how people work and play in your community.

Can they get around easily and safely in every season?

Are there attractive buildings and parks and other spaces where they can gather?

Transportation

Consider the types of vehicular transportation that is available within your community, especially for those who do not own a car or are unable to drive or have varying physical and mental challenges.

How do people travel from your community to other centres?

Is public transportation available?

Housing

Think about the housing options available for people so that they may stay within their own homes and within the community throughout the ages and stages of their lives.

Are housing options affordable? Available?

Are there sufficient types of housing available for those with special needs?

Social Participation

Think about the variety of events and activities that are available for people of all ages, including physical and recreational activities, spectator events, and cultural events that take place both indoors and outdoors.

Are community events intentionally intergenerational and designed to appeal to people of different ages and from different backgrounds?
